Antoine Langlais joined the firm's economic law team as an associate in 2026.

Before joining the firm, Antoine gained experience at international law firms and within international groups. He advises French and international companies across a range of sectors, including luxury goods, the automotive industry, construction and the digital sector.

Antoine advises and represents clients in both advisory and litigation matters across the full spectrum of economic law, particularly in relation to anticompetitive practices (cartels and abuse of a dominant position), restrictive practices, as well as merger control and foreign investment.

He represents clients before the French and European competition authorities, as well as in commercial disputes before the civil and commercial courts.
