Lisa Ribes is an associate at JP Karsenty & Associés and is admitted to the Paris Bar. She advises and represents French and international clients on the protection, enhancement and enforcement of their intangible assets.

Her practice covers both advisory and litigation work in intellectual property law under French and European Union law, including trade marks, designs, copyright and patents. She also handles unfair competition and free-riding (parasitism), advertising and media law, image rights and commercial litigation.

Before joining the firm, she spent two years in London as in-house IP counsel within the global legal department of a leading luxury house. She previously trained with top-tier international law firms and at the Paris Court of Appeal, in the chamber specialising in intellectual property and unfair competition.

Fluent in French and English, she regularly works alongside foreign counsel on cross-border matters.
